COURSE DESCRIPTION

M.Com is the art of presenting financial information of any business organization to users such as shareholders and managers, which is generally in the form of financial statements.

In common words, we know accountancy as the primary and most sought after subject in the department of commerce. Students having qualification in this field have very good knowledge of monetary matters and are generally termed as accountants.

The study of accountancy also includes auditing and financial statements. The shareholders and investors need to know the truth about a company's financial state and that is why the job of an accountant matters the most.

Accounting is the process of analyzing, verifying and reporting the results of financial information to an organization, government agency or individual.

Some of the most popular fields include:

Forensic Accounting

Certified Internal Auditor

Comptroller/Controller
