COURSE DESCRIPTION

"Man is a social being." all of us have heard this at some point in our lives, and rightfully so. As the word explains, sociology is the study of society. A society encompasses people, their relationships with one another, and their behaviour towards different communities and groups. This behavioural element is carefully taken up under several contexts and settings. This setting is openly influenced by various components like Urban and Rural environment, ethnicity, religion, and culture, etc. Sociology includes the study of these interlinked components of the society and analyses them concerning various personal, political, environmental, and economic matters.
